

Overall biking is more prevalent in Summer than in Winter or the rainy months of June, July and August.

Based on the timings of the day, we can infer that most bikers travel early in the morning and again in the later afternoon and end at the same station that they start from. This can be a possible indication that riders are currently using bikes for traveling to work.

There are more male riders than females and people ride more at an early age. It is also observed that there is a trend of more people adopting biking at the age of 50, which can be indicative that this might be driven by certain age dependent factors.

Riders concentration is more towards the western side of the city and around Manhattan, rather than the eastern edges of NewYork.